TOURISTS REMEMBER GOOD BEDS AND BATHS

Rest is the chief thing a tourist home has to sell. Motorists want most a comfortable night's sleep with relief from fatigue and nervous strain. They usually want a hot bath, too. A quiet room, a comfortable bed with covers of the right weight for the time of year are all-important.

Good springs and good mattresses are paying investments. Comfortable pillows, neither too stiff nor too thin, plenty of blankets and quilts, are equally important. It is a good rule to test the equipment by sleeping once in each bedroom before the season opens.

It goes without saying that the bathroom should always be spotless. Hot water for bathing is expected. If the floor is not tiled, deck varnish or linoleum makes it easier to care for. There should be a mirror with a shelf below it on which to set toilet articles, towel bars, clothing hooks, a wastebasket, and a small hamper for soiled towels.

If the house has no bathroom, it is practically an unavoidable investment for the tourist-home business. A bathroom might be located in a small unused bedroom or at the end of a hall. Ventilation by a window or ventilator is necessary. A bulletin on economical home installation of plumbing may be obtained from _____ or the U. S. Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C.
